Far from the Madding Crowd by Thomas Hardy

SYNOPSIS: After inheriting her prosperous uncle's farm, Hardy's protagonist, Bathsheba Everdene, becomes an independent woman. But her beauty attracts many admirers: farm worker Gabriel Oak, landowner William Boldwood, and handsome soldier Frank Troy, whom she later marries. However, Troy is a selfish man who allows his earlier love, Fanny Robin, to die in poverty while giving birth to his child. Boldwood is madly jealous of Troy, and later in the novel this is the reason for his downfall when, in a jealous rage, he kills Troy. Gabriel asks for mercy to be shown him, and, on the grounds of insanity, Boldwood escapes death but is sent to prison. The novel ends with Bathsheba marrying Gabriel.

COMMENTARY: Incidents such as Fanny's pregnancy and pitiful death, and Boldwood's act of murderous violence, convey Hardy's growing taste for tragedy. But unlike Tess in the later Tess

a short summary of the plot of a of the D'Urbervilles, fate still favours Bathsheba. She finally finds contentment with Gabriel, who embodies the best qualities of the rural community in the fight against the growth of industrialism, which Hardy finds so alien.

Another theme in the novel is the danger and destruction inherent in romantic love and marriage. Hardy exposes the irrationality and betrayals of romantic relationships, and implies that the true basis of a happy marriage is companionship and a common interest. For some it is also an early example of feminist literature. Bathsheba is portrayed as an independent woman with the courage to defy convention and run a farm herself. Her passionate nature leads her into errors of judgement, but Hardy endows her with the resilience, intelligence, and good luck to overcome the mistakes of youth.
